

CLINICAL SKILLS & MANAGEMENT

Verification of Expected Death

A Verification of Expected Death Training course covers many fundamental and advanced skills from physical examinations to legal policies regarding a patient's death and the interpersonal skills when delivering bad news.

Programme/Course Content

- Legal and Professional Issues surrounding the practice of nurse verification of death
- Policies and procedures
- What is an expected death
- Breaking bad news and effective communication
- How to verify an expected death
- Record keeping
- Reporting concerns
- Summary and evaluation

Aimed at: Each of our courses can be tailored to meet your team's requirements, whether introductory, intermediate or advanced. We can design the ideal solution to accommodate your team's ability, knowledge, practical experience and previous training.

Accreditation: Compliant with the National Occupation Standards for Health and Social Care Workers and satisfies the requirements of the Care Quality Commission

Further information: If you require a Verification of Expected death training course for nurses that is compliant to the NMC standards for this extended role then please contact us via telephone or email for a no obligation discussion.